Individual Remote Learning Plans

Overview

An Individual Remote Learning Plan (IRLP) is available for students whose families have determined that they will not physically attend school. These students are still enrolled in school, have attendance taken daily, and have the same work requirements as students who physically go to school. All live instruction will be conducted by faculty of the Concord Public Schools or Concord-Carlisle High School.

Below are the proposed structures for these individual plans. This is subject to change depending on the number of students who enroll. Families would be notified prior to modifications of the proposed plan if that should occur.

Families may opt into a fully remote plan prior to the start of the 2020-2021 school year. Initially, we are requesting a commitment of a quarter (K-5, 9-12) or trimester (6-8). The goal is a fluid environment but during the rollout of the remote learning plans some stability is required. Students who begin the year in-person can opt into a remote learning plan noting that the transition may take a number of school days for the school to facilitate.

How to Enroll Your Child

The deadline for enrollment was August 12. Please email the following people at each school if you have questions after August 12:

In the Remote Learning Program, students will be grouped by grade and taught by classroom teachers, elementary curriculum coordinators and elementary assistant principals via ZOOM. Sample schedules are on the next page.

From 9 AM - 12:25 PM, students will be taught by discipline specific or combined discipline educators. For example, a first grader will have 3 educators: one for literacy and social studies, one for mathematics and science, and one counselor for Open Circle. Educators working at a grade level span would work together to coordinate to deliver the usual curriculum (Lucy Caulkins writing units, Foundations, Everyday Math 4, FOSS science, created units and special projects). In order to accommodate the numbers at a grade level, the educator would break the grade level into sections in order to create more effective Zoom meetings.

From 12:20 PM- 1:25 PM, there would be a lunch break. From 1:25 - 3:30, students would have special classes, independent work from specials, independent work from morning classes, and independent work on software programs. Students will be assigned to a primary classroom in their grade level.

For one period each afternoon, students would have a special class (art, physical education, Spanish, music and library). For this, they will “ZOOM” into the special class as it is being delivered for their grade level at their home school. During “Independent Work” time, students will have some asynchronous activities to do to enhance the special subject areas.

In the afternoons, students work independently on reading, writing, math, science and social studies. This work may be a continuation of what they were studying in the morning, such as pages from the Everyday Math workbook. This work will also be adaptive skills practice in software assigned by their teacher of that subject. For example, a student’s math teacher would assign the lessons in “DreamBox.”

Students participate in the classes in their usual schedule by being assigned to one of the two alphabetical groups of students. Instructional will be a combination of synchronous learning and independent work.. This includes all their academic classes, electives, and their homeBASE advisory group. All expectations are the same for students who are physically going to school and those who are working entirely remotely.
